

GZD Badminton Club

Website Proposal

Prepared by Shil — June 22, 2026

Introduction

When I offered to build a website for the club, I said I would put together a simple version for free. Since then, I have ended up building something a bit more capable than originally planned, and I wanted to lay out both versions honestly so you can choose what actually makes sense for the club, rather than assuming you want the more complex one.

This document covers both options, what they look like in practice, what they cost now and over time, and what is involved in handing the site over to you fully.

Option A: Static Site (Free)

This is the version I originally offered: a complete, fully designed website with all the pages and content we agree on, built and hosted at no cost, offered as a friend and club member discount. A static site like this, built by a freelancer, typically costs £200 to £450 on the open market.

Worth knowing: this version has no built-in way to edit content directly. Any future change, such as a new tournament date, a sponsor logo, or fixing a typo, would need to be coded into the site. This does not have to be me specifically; it just needs someone comfortable editing code.

This is a good fit if the site's content will stay mostly the same after launch, with only occasional updates expected.

Option B: Self-Managed Site via Google Sheets (£600)

This version includes everything in Option A, plus a way to update the website's content without touching any code at all.

How it works, in plain terms: the website is connected to a Google Sheet, similar to an Excel spreadsheet but online. Certain parts of the site, such as tournament listings, announcements, and sponsor names, are pulled directly from rows in that spreadsheet. Add, edit, or remove a row, and the website updates automatically within a few minutes, with no coding knowledge needed by anyone managing the club's content.

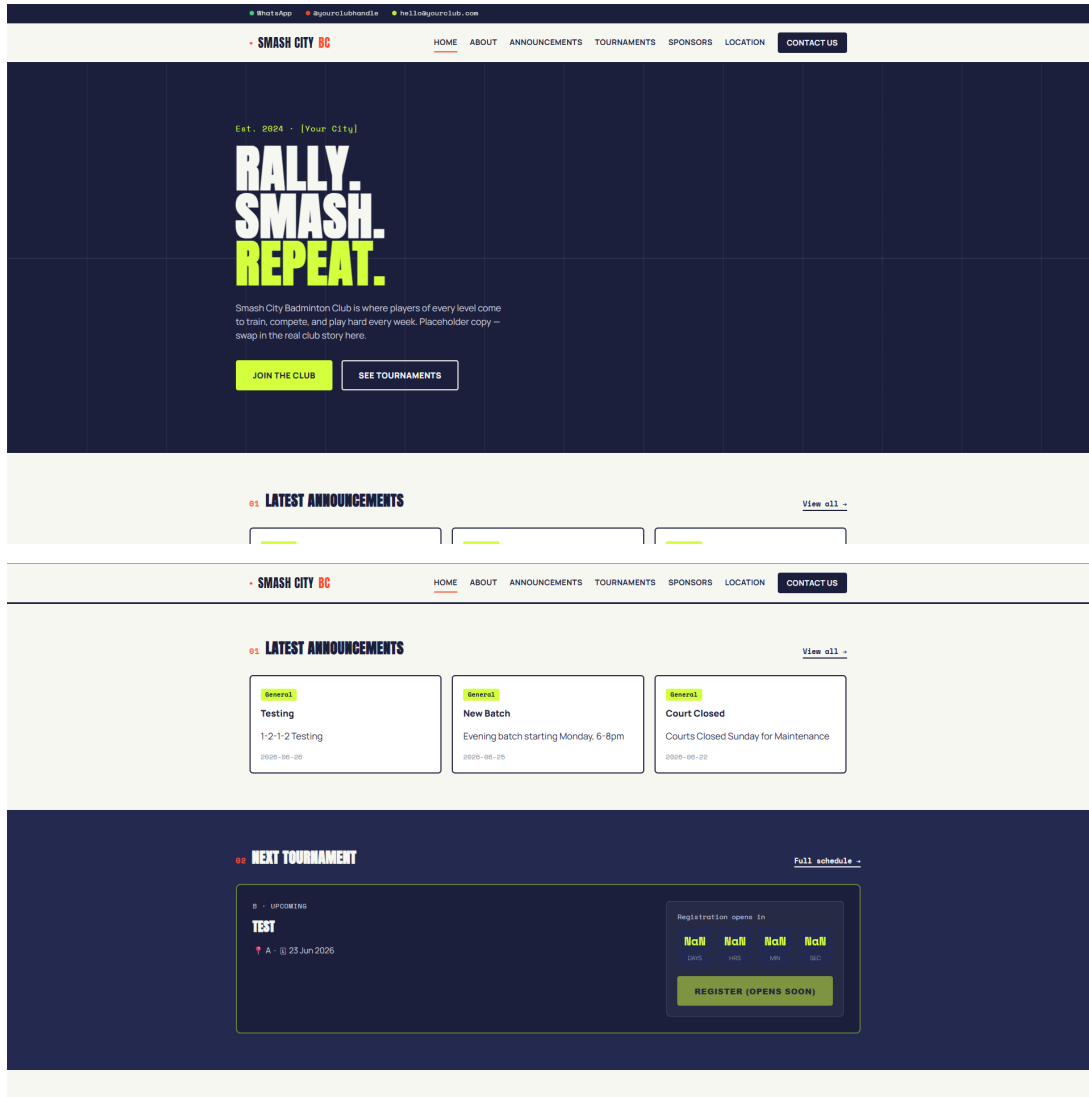

Exactly what this looks like is shown in the Feature Showcase section below, with descriptions of the website page alongside the spreadsheet row that controls it.

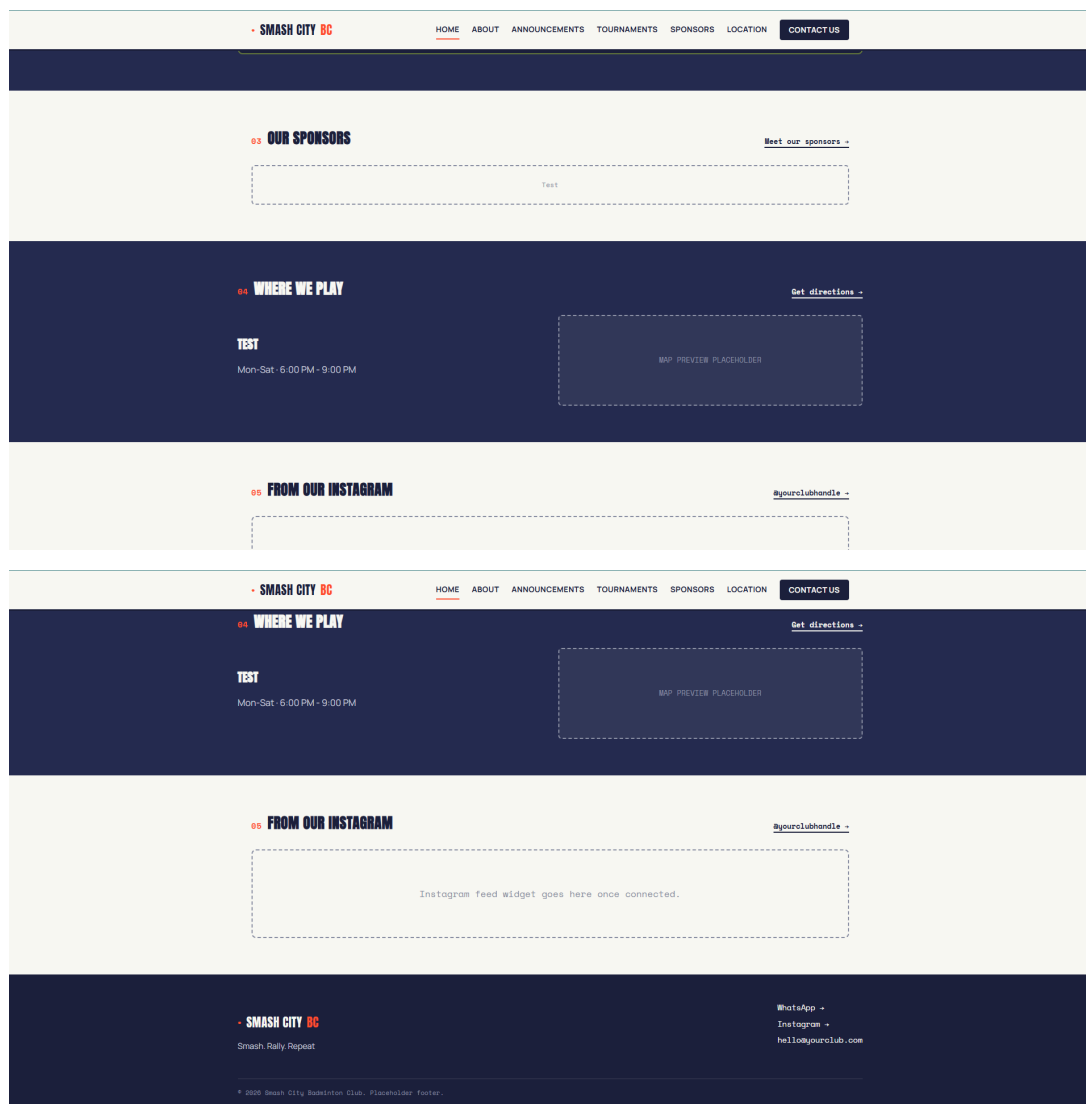

Cost comparison: a custom setup like this, letting someone manage content without coding knowledge, typically costs £800 to £1200 from a freelancer or agency. Ready-made platforms like Squarespace or Wix offer similar self-editing capability but charge an ongoing subscription of roughly £15 to £25 per month, indefinitely. This option is a one-time cost of £600, with no subscription, ever, well below what either of those routes would normally run.

Feature Showcase

Note: what is shown below reflects the site as it currently stands, mostly placeholder content and still rough around the edges in places. This is meant to show how each page works, not the finished product. I will continue refining and polishing once a decision is made on direction. Pages can also be added, removed, or changed after we discuss next steps.

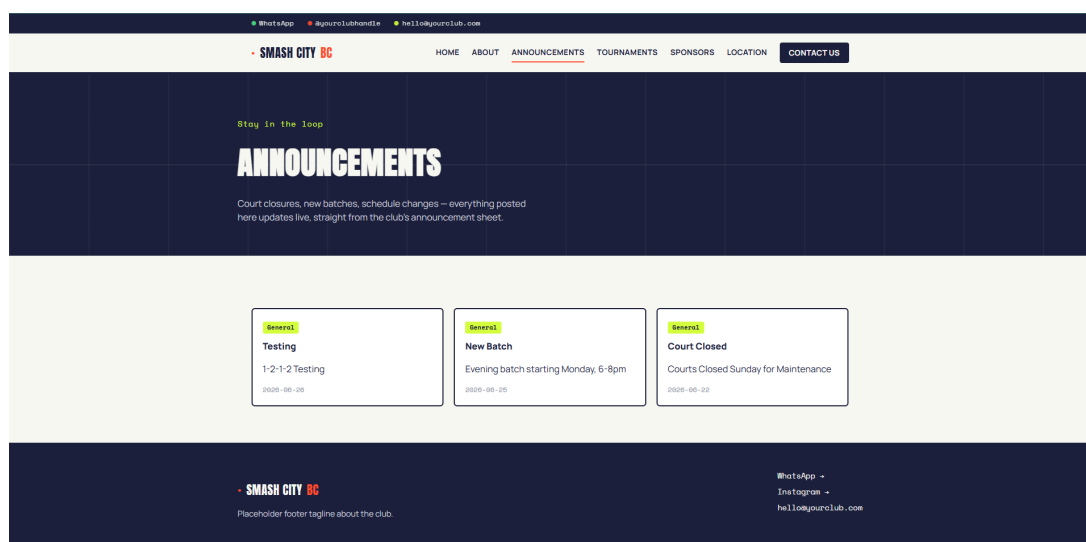

Home

What this means for you: The overall look and feel, including colours, layout, and navigation, set up to feel sporty and club-branded. This page ties the rest of the site together.

Announcements Tournaments Location Sponsors Settings About

What this means for you: Posting a club announcement, such as a notice, reminder, or update, is just adding a row to the Sheet. Removing it is just deleting the row.

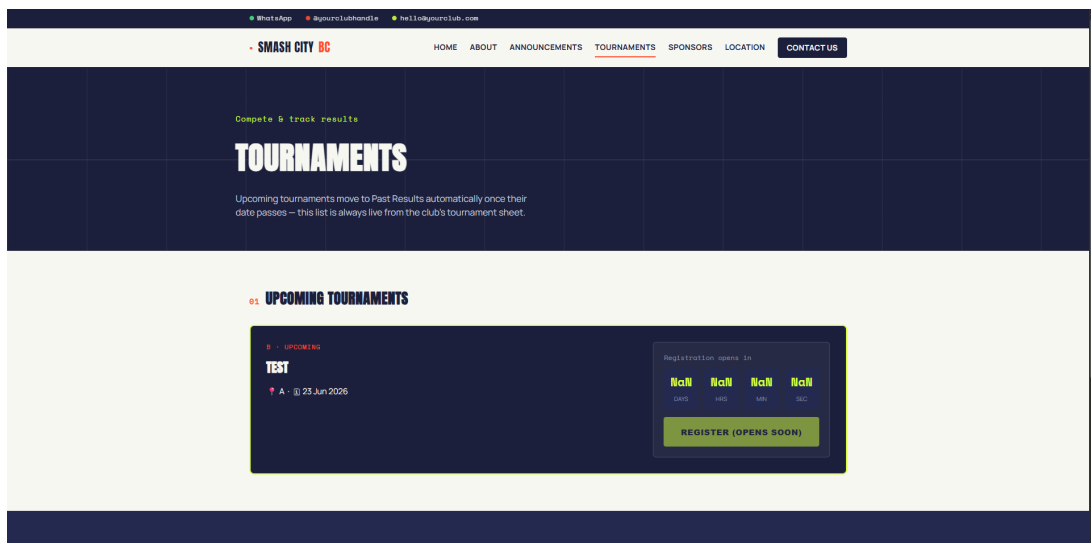

About

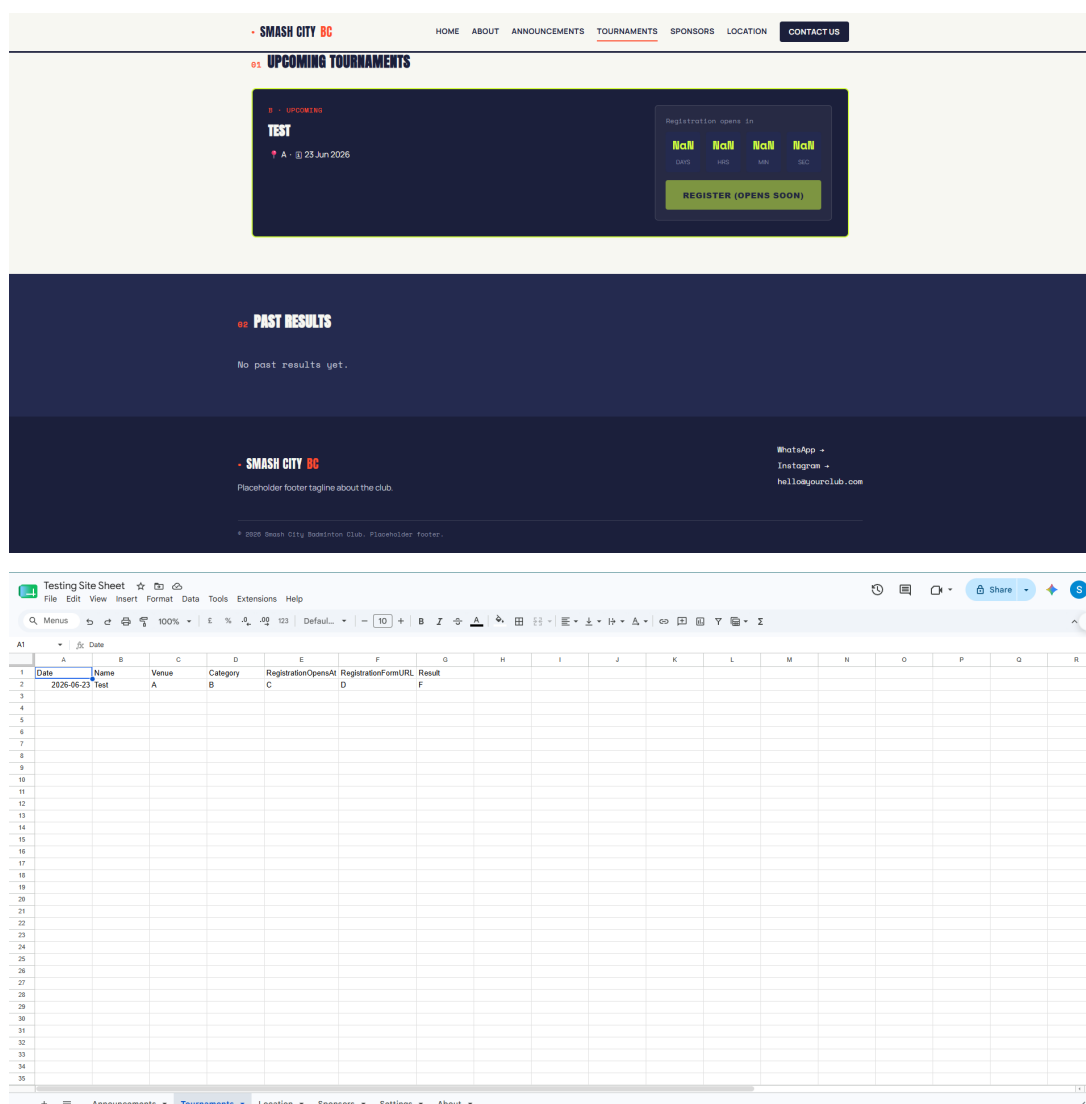

What this means for you: Updating things like the club's description, history, or mission statement is done by editing the relevant row's value, with no need to touch the page layout itself.

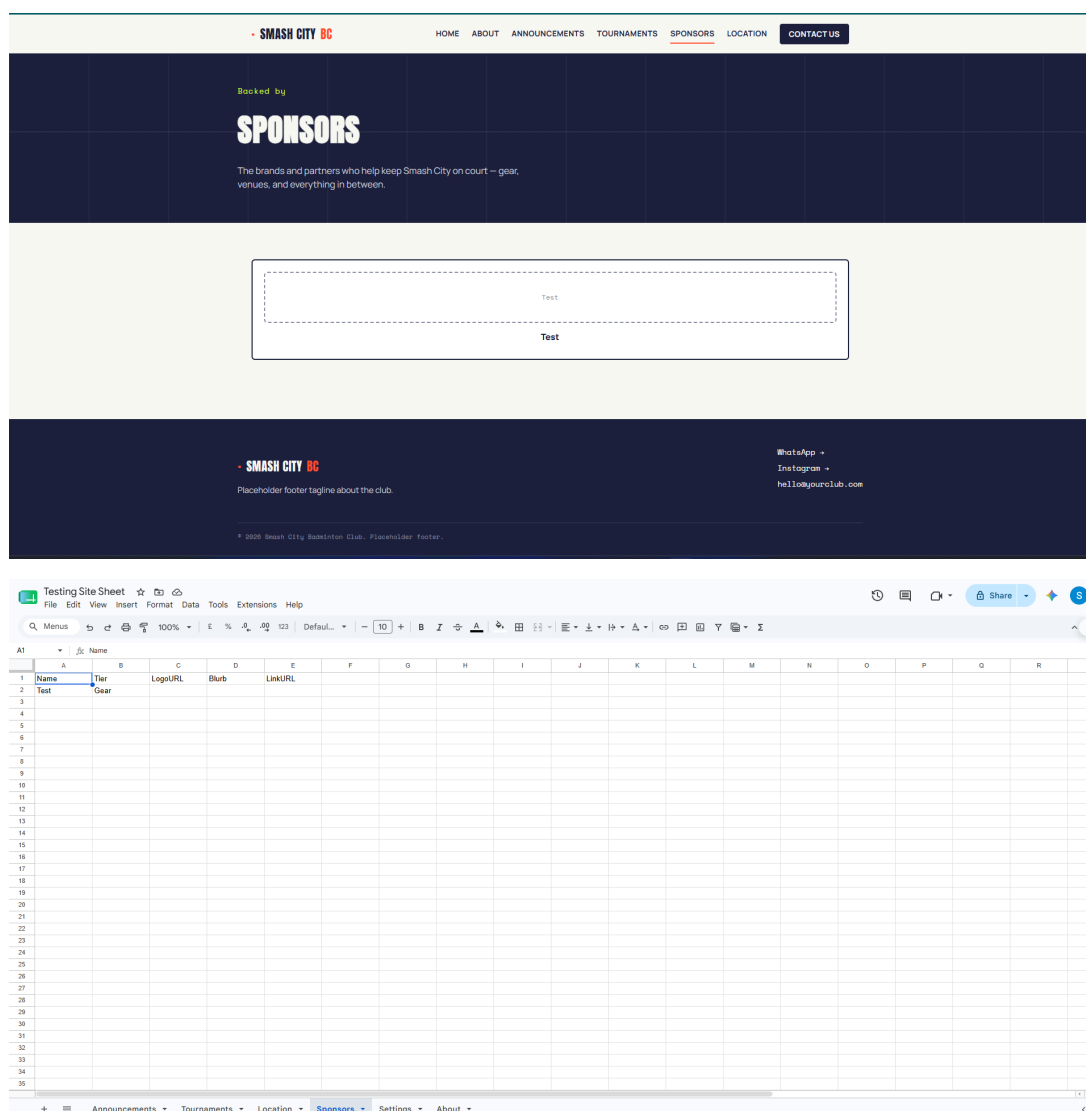

Tournaments

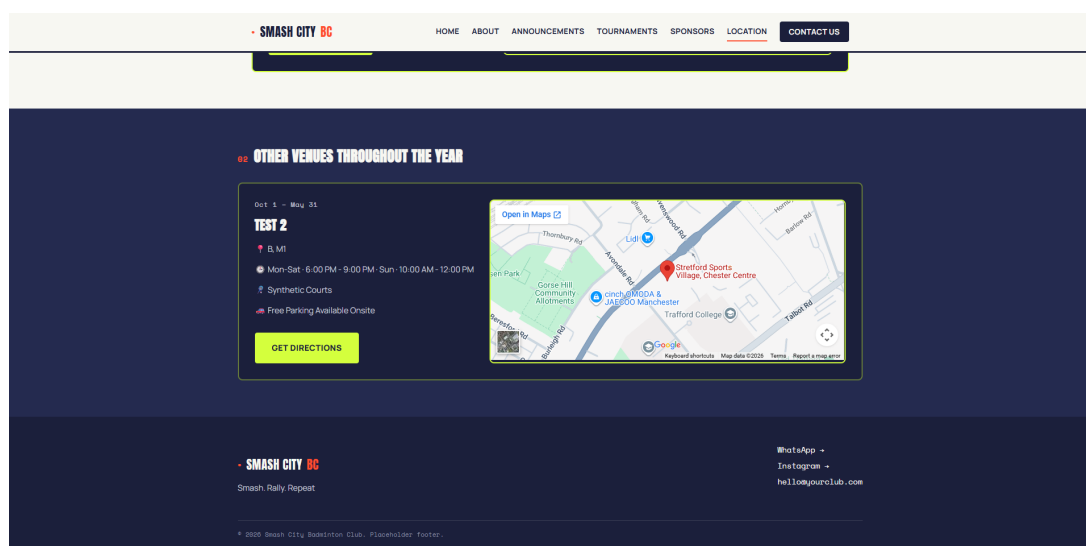

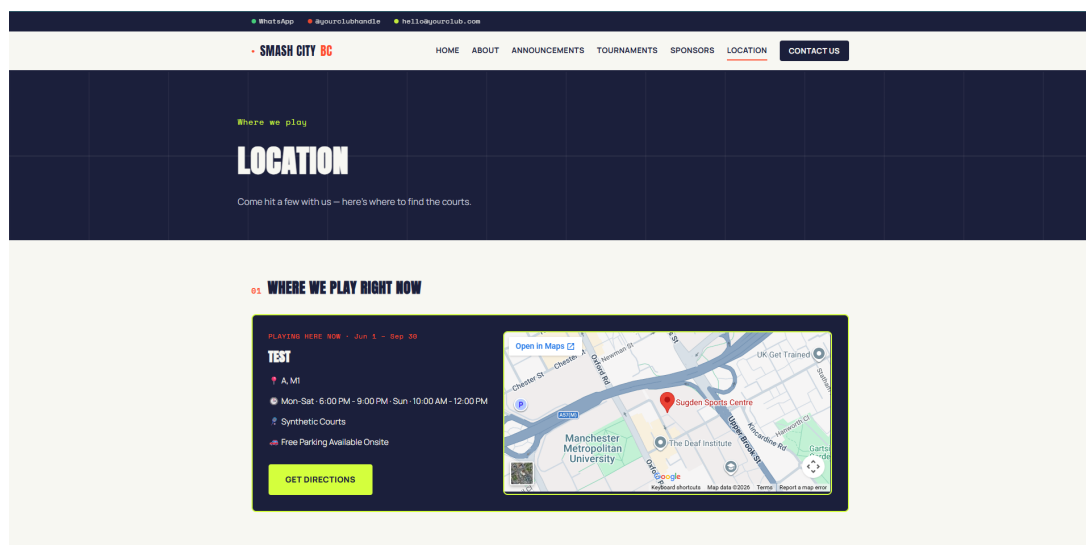

What this means for you: Tournaments automatically sort by date. Upcoming events show as “upcoming,” and past ones move into a results or history view automatically. Adding a new tournament is just adding a new row with its name, date, and category.

Sponsors

What this means for you: Adding, removing, or updating a sponsor (name, logo link, tier) is the same process. Edit a row, and the site reflects it automatically.

What this means for you: If the club ever changes venue or wants to update directions, it is a one-line edit in the Sheet.

Contact Us

What this means for you: This page is static for now, set up with the club's current contact details, but can be connected to the Sheet just like the others if you would like it editable too.

One more thing: if there is anything shown above, or anything not yet listed, that you would like to be editable by you under Option B, just let me know and it can be set up that way.

Maintenance and Support

I will continue working on the site, and stay on as a collaborator on the code, until you are fully satisfied with how it looks and works. Full handoff, and the maintenance terms below, only apply after that point. Up until then, any changes and refinements are part of the original build, not billed separately.

Once handed off, if you would like a change made directly rather than (in Option B's case) doing it via the Sheet yourself, the following applies:

Type of change	Examples	Cost
Quick tweak	Fixing a typo, swapping an image, small text edit	£15–25
Small feature	New section, new page element, small design change	£40–75
Bigger ask	Redesign, new functionality	Quoted individually

The key difference between the two options: under Option A, every change, even small ones, needs to be coded in, falling into one of these tiers. Under Option B, anything covered by the Google Sheet (tournaments, announcements, sponsors) requires no code and no cost; these tiers only apply to things outside that, like a new page or a structural change.

Worth keeping in mind: if the club expects even a handful of small updates over a year, those costs under Option A can add up to more than the one-time £600 fee for Option B, which is part of why Option B tends to be the more economical long-term choice for a site expecting regular updates.

Ownership and Handoff

I will remain a collaborator on the site's code until you are happy with the final result. At that point, full ownership, including the code itself, transfers fully to a GitHub account the club controls, with no ongoing dependency on me. After handoff, I am happy to remain available for maintenance requests as outlined above, but the club is under no obligation to use me specifically for future changes.

Side-by-Side Summary

	Option A (Free)	Option B (£600)
Cost to build	£0	£600 (one-time)
Who updates content	Requires someone who can code	Anyone, via Sheets, no coding needed
Cost per content change	£15–75 per request	Free (via Sheet)
Ongoing subscription	None	None
Ownership	Club, after handoff	Club, after handoff
Best for	Minimal future changes expected	Regular updates expected

Next Steps

Happy to talk through either option, answer any questions, or adjust based on what makes sense for the club's needs and budget. No pressure either way; the goal is for you to end up with a site that works well for how the club actually plans to use it.
